For Greater Mississippi

Devoted to the Agricultural, Commercial and Industrial Development of the State's Incomparable Resources-Official Organ of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce,

By H. E. BLAKESLEE, Jackson.

One of the most valuable discoveries | Arrangements have been perfected to years old that has not fermeated in the least. That it is just as good as when reptacle of water close beside the evap-orator and keep the water at boiling heat. When the molasses comes from the pan and while boiling hot, pour into the hot bottle, push corks below top of bottle a little way and seal with wax. This is all there is to it. Now if there are others who see this article and have tried it with or without success, let me hear from you. If not, it is especially desired that it be given a trial at several places in the State this summer when the crushing season begins. If you will try it with a dozen or more bottles of syrup, let the writer know at once, and he will keep in touch with you and gladly report the success attained. ern part with sorghum cane. If the crop can be preserved for summer use withsyrup crop of the State could be made to bring millions of dollars. No syrup in the world compares with the cane syrup made from Louisiana cane on a common sorghum pan, and not far be-hind is the molasses made from sorgiven by this department and general licity guaranteed should the be found. It is a subject worthy of attention at the hands of our people.

On the 1st instant the writer's aged mother passed away at his home in Jackson. The remains were carried to the old home at New Albany for interment. Many who read this notice will understand, having experienced the irredisappointments, this is the end of the resent and the beginning of a brighter existence. Friends in Jackson and New bany were attentive and sympathetic. and in this connection it is said to contemplate that in a few more years these old negroes will all have passed from the scene of action and the erop is not capacitated to take their places. Our Southerners know how to appreciate these old mammies and will miss them in the future.

Within the past ten days the writer has traveled over a large portion of the State north of the A. & V. railroad, and was very much gratified to find the crops cotton and corn were clean and healthy, cotton rather small for the time of year, but growing nicely. Rains bad fallen almost over the entire district, and generally proved to be excellent sea- a great deal to cotton fields infested oat crop was being harvested and yielding about as usual. Mississippi is doing splendidly and our people have a great deal to be thankful for. No State in the Union offers more for the expenditure of a moderate amount of energy and fair management. Impress this fact upon the young men and induce them to stay with us.

The matter of increasing the land assessments in South Mississippi is attracting considerable attention. Immense quantities of this land is held by foreign investors, who are paying taxes on it at less than one-fourth of what is actually worth, and the citizens who are paying on theirs at something near its value and furnishing the sinew for appreciation in value for all of it are getting tired of bearing the whole burden. The new assessment will be far above that of four years ago, likely more than twice as much. Such action on the part of our assessors would likely compel the holders to develop their ands or sell to some one who would. outcome of the agitation will be watched with interest.

Greenville has recently taken a decided step forward, and one that will prove an investment without compare. Twenty miles of granolithic pavement best paved city of its size in the State. pavement was secured at remarkably low prices, being contracted for in such large quantities, and at the same time it possesses that advantage of per-fect uniformity, which could not be secured by individual contract by each property owner. Good streets and good roads are the greatest boons to a com-munity, and those with the best of prosperous. Better roads should be the slogan of all enthusiastic citizens of our state, and the analysis of our state, and the slogan of all enthusiastic citizens of our state, and the slogan of all enthusiastic citizens of our state of the slogan of th State, and the campaign kept alive until they are secured.

Writers with experience have given in the State. cotton, or keep the grass down, as one-fourth the number of hoe hands. It is likely that a number will be induced by the publicity given the scheme to it right in timber and mineral country to be opened up by the publicity given the scheme to give it a trial, and in this event the result would make good reading for this depontment.

The one who waves it be comes responsible for the damage. The proposition for a dispensary has so enraged some of the opponents that by their intemperate and intolerant words injury to themselves and the city may follow. For this reason the red flag, so far as I am concerned, will come down and no petition will be presented. suggest that the campaign funds be used to help the poor.
